Plowing Snow With One's Head

I fell from my sled
and plowed snow with my head.

I held back the cries
and waited while tears cleared my eyes.

It was cold
and I felt foolish and bold.

My clothes were soggy, heavy and wet
my toes and fingers were wrinkled from the moisture they'd met.

As the wind whipped through to my chest
I thought to go home would be best.

And so I ascended the hill forgetting the thrill pulling my sled behind.

At the top of the hill
I remembered the thrill

I dove to my sled
and downhill we fled

picking up speed
fulfilling the need to run careless and free

for a moment, to be.

I fell from my sled
and plowed snow with my head . . .

Mount Sentinel

Time now for walking over
The slopes of Sentinel
The sun lays its hot salvo in Against a landscape shaggy and white
And morning dew is gone.
The high clouds drift, far overhead
Heavy and white and cumulous.
But on the slope,
The shreds of morning mist,
Still leaving,
Twist like scarfs of water,
Lay along,
Then crawl over the tall uprise.
The sun's barrage just strengthens
This frail white,
And, hanging in there cold,
Rock ridges good for walking,
Can be seen.

Jesus of Brooklyn, He came and He went.
The fellas all said He was from heaven sent.
Now I'm gonna tell ya the way it all looked,
Just take me real serious and you won't get rooked.
He came outa nowhere, real spooky, ya know?
And then He came on like a vaudeville show.

He whipped out a comic and read it aloud,
And made all them common words sound awful proud!
We snickered and pointed and shut him up fast,
But you know these weirdos, my gosh, they can last!
He stared and He stared 'til we cut our noise,
Then he opened his mouth and said, "God bless you boys."

Well, we all bugeyed with nothin' to say,
So we grabbed up our stuff and was startin' away,
When he knelt on the pavement and, lookin' real sad,
He talked to some guy that I guess was His dad.
He asked for his help and a strong guiding hand,
And hoped he would make the whole world understand.

Well, since He was new to our lingo and all,
We felt kinda sorry for leaving and all,
And He was sort funny, and pitiful too,
So we sat and we figured on what we should do
Cuz He was a stranger and we was all friends,
And all of us backs up what one of us lends.

Yeah, finally we thought of the best thing to do,
(The guy was still kneelin'; his eyes was closed, too!
And he was sayin' things all about us,
And how he was hoping to win all our trust.)
We told Him a story, naw, none of it true,
'Bout how He should visit this man we all knew.

We went down the alley and led him along,
And hoped that our plan wouldn't turn out all wrong.
We got to the doorstep before he caught on,
He fretted and asked that His sins all be gone.
We'd took Him the only nice place that we knew,
So we pushed Him on in and took off, the whole gang!

I wanted to know if it worked out okay,
So I sneaked back around while the guys ran away.
I opened the door to the church, which it was,
And the door really creaked like it usually does.
But the weirdo was gone and his comic book, too,
So I ask, did we save him, or what did we do?

Jesus of Brooklyn, He came but He's gone.
The story I'm telling can't really go on,
Cuz all I can say that I know of the guy,
Is that He was in Brooklyn in early July.
And I hope He's okay now, wherever He is,
And He's back with his dad—and—God bless Him—gee whiz!
—God bless Him—gee whiz!

All the rivers run into the sea yet the sea is not full

Home Hotel: Summer '68

We tore the old whorehouse down yesterday. Fire scarred and long deserted, only bums were sleeping there, laying on rusted bed springs (room rent absolutely in advance).
Only kids laughed in the square rooms,
sounds that once cost a dollar
now free. Trespass is also illegal, and this law the sheriff enforces.
Scavengers and former tenants had salvaged what useful brass and iron there might have been.
There's no gold here Emily.

We started in with pick and axe, tearing planks and tar paper from the third story roof. Dump trucks go north to the junkyard, the road past the pink, third-generation Hillside Ranch, half the size and outside the city limits.
Work went too slow: a back-hoe,
a dozer and five men against plaster walls.
All our tools, all our machines broke on the stiff wood beams, so the Boss and the others, drunk and mad, splashed gas on the floor and finished what the first fire started.

WATANI

The Wotani was started fall quarter by UM Black Students.
Following is an article by Esther Doss, taken from the February edition.

Feelings About Dick Gregory

Last Tuesday, February 16, we had the rare opportunity to listen to the words of one of the most honest men in America, Mr. Dick Gregory. He was comical, truthful, and never lacking the morality and ethics he asked of us as young people. The old cliché that you can't trust anyone over 30 is irrelevant in the case of this 30-year old Black man. His honesty, personal fortitude and immense concern for all humanity gave me the hope and extra strength to keep fighting for what I believe in.

Some of his critics consider him to be egotistical. I consider him to be a firm example of the type of Black man who is confident in who he is and who makes no compromises with an "oppressive and morally degenerate, criminal society."

His words ran home to me the full reality and depth of degeneracy this country has fallen into. He told us that the old folks left us a horrible mess to clear up and as I looked around I saw non-believing white faces that frowned at his hilarious monologue on the New Niggers—I asked myself if the longhairs—America's new niggers—were willing to jump down off that privileged horse of white society and begin to fight, really fight the way Blacks have had to fight for hundreds of years. I wondered if they would be able to leave the drugs and denounce the racism that we Blacks already know to be the reasons for the genocide of this nation's young.

I felt proud of each and every one of my Black brothers who made it their job to be Brother Dick's body guards while he was here. They protected him with love and surrounded him in such a way that I think someone would have been a fool if they had tried to harm Brother Dick in any way. I think also it reflected how we feel about a man that cares and respects all of us enough to tell us the simple and honest truth about the world.

As he spoke about the CIA and the threats on his life, a cold feeling ran through my body. I understood then that the closer and closer to the truth that one reveals about the inner workings of this government, the closer one comes to the end of life. However, as I looked at Brother Gregory's face, I saw the calm bearing of a man who was not afraid. In his own words from an Ebony article, he says, "The hardest man in the world to kill is a man that's ethically honest and morally sound because he's not going out of his way to duck nothing. . . . He carries himself in a way that scares a whole lot of people. . . . I've looked at history and the closest they've ever come to killing a truly morally honest-to-the-nth-degree man was Socrates, and he took his own poison."

This helped me to understand how Angela Davis, Huey Newton, Bobby Seale, Eldridge and Kathleen Cleaver, and so many other Black leaders both in the past and present have been able to fight for the liberation of Black people and still live life to the greatest capacity even though death stalks two steps behind.

I felt that Brother Dick was not a stranger but a man of the people. He stated that there was hope that we could save this world with our moral force and as young people we are not so completely set in the ways of deceit that a new type of morality can rise out of us which is not phony or hypocritical or punitive but one that can possibly change a system and make it possible for us to find that New Humanity that Ulysses Doss keeps roppin' to us about. The one that will allow us to accept people as people and not by the type race, classification or whatever.
